The City of Inglewood has approved the project, which will include a world-class basketball arena, practice facility and team offices for the L.A. Clippers. The arena will be located on the site of the former Inglewood Forum, which was demolished in 2001. The arena will be a state-of-the-art facility, featuring a retractable roof and a glass facade. The arena will be owned and operated by the Clippers, and will be used for home games, practice, and team offices. The arena will also be used for other events, such as concerts and community events. The arena is expected to be completed in 2018.

Opinion: Can Working Parents Still Teach Their Kids at Home?

As a parent, you know your child's education is one of the most important things you can do for them. But what if you're a working parent? Can you still teach your child at home? The answer is yes, but it's not always easy. Working parents often have limited time and resources to devote to their children's education. However, there are many ways to make the most of your time and resources. You can use online resources, hire tutors, and involve your child in their own learning. You can also make the most of your commute and downtime. The key is to be creative and committed to your child's education.
