Clippers Arena in Inglewood Cleared to Go

The announcement of the project will include a world-class basketball arena, practice facility and team offices for the L.A. Clippers.

The City of Inglewood has approved the project for the new arena in Inglewood. The project will include a world-class basketball arena, practice facility and team offices for the L.A. Clippers. The arena will be located on the site of the former Inglewood Coliseum. The project is expected to be completed in 2013. The arena will be a state-of-the-art facility with seating for 18,000 fans. The arena will also include a practice facility and team offices. The project is expected to create jobs and boost the local economy.
