Opinion: Can Working Parents Still Teach Their Kids at Home?

By [Name] - In today's fast-paced world, many parents are struggling to balance their careers with their family responsibilities. This raises the question of whether working parents can still provide a quality education for their children at home. While there are many challenges, it is not impossible. Parents can create a structured learning environment at home and seek out additional resources and support. The key is to be proactive and committed to their children's education.
